

Mooncake

Written by Ray Hecht

Published by kctv7

Table of Contents

Mooncake Recipe	1
Mooncake Calories	2
Mooncake Festival	3
Mooncake Near Me	4
Mooncake Mold	5
Mooncakes San Francisco	6
Mooncake Story	7
Mooncakes Chinese New Year	8
Mooncake Filling	9

Mooncake

By Ray Hecht

Mooncake Recipe

It is Mid-Autumn Festival in Lunar Colony 01111001's Chinatown, a holiday celebrated by eating mooncake and regaling with tales of Chang'e flying to the moon.

Mooncake Calories

Little Xiao Yue asks her grandfather what it all means. There is always a generation gap. How can precocious children in the future understand the metaphor?

Mooncake

Mooncake Festival

Mooncake Near Me

Enjoy this short short, a taste of one writer's science fiction and Sino overlap..

I usually refrain from reading science fiction however, I thought I would give this book a try. I thought it was interesting that Ray spoke of the 'moon' in a habitable sense, while 'earth' was seen as inhabitable, with the main character looking out into the sky to the 'earth' as opposed to the 'moon' (possibly a prediction of what is to come?) I liked how Ray described why 'Mid-Autumn Festival' was given its name, while speaking of various other cultural references in relation to the Lunar Col I usually refrain from reading science fiction however, I thought I would give this book a try. I thought it was interesting that Ray spoke of the 'moon' in a habitable sense, while 'earth' was seen as inhabitable, with the main character looking out into the sky to the 'earth' as opposed to the 'moon' (possibly a prediction of what is to come?) I liked how Ray described why 'Mid-Autumn Festival' was given its name, while speaking of various other cultural references in relation to the Lunar Colony of 01111001. Definitely a short but touching story about how those in the distant future may see the world in a totally different light (literally). ...more

Mooncake Mold

An interesting little story this one. I liked the way the modern day moon generation found it hard to grasp the common things (such as phrases and euphemisms) we ourselves as earthlings take for granted.

In fact the whole story is basically one big clash of old and new, but dealt with in such a way as to leave the reader contemplating such a future. And I quite liked that about it...Good stuff indeed.

This story is great. Mid-autumn festival celebrates the moon goddess Chang'e. In the distant future, even human moon colonies now have Chinatowns. How do they celebrate and explain this story while living on the moon? A very clever premise and an enjoyable story to read.

Mooncake

Mooncakes San Francisco

Mooncake Story

Mooncakes Chinese New Year

Mooncake Filling